

My first stay in Marrakech

Find your bearings, choose a base and plan three days at your own pace. A preparation guide for a first visit, solo, as a couple or with friends.

Start with your priorities

This guide helps you make choices rather than see everything. Pick two priorities: heritage, gardens, food, shopping or quiet time. Give each a realistic slot. A third interest stays optional.

The suggested routes are editorial plans, not guided services or routes field-tested by us. Adapt them to your address, the weather and confirmed opening times. The journal and budget guide are optional companions; neither is required to use this book.

Images are AI-generated. Scenes and people are fictional; landmark views are interpretations, not documentary photographs. No generated map is used for navigation.

Your departure brief

Record usable time before booking: three nights do not always provide four sightseeing days. Write down arrival, accommodation checkout and the reporting time required by your carrier.

Check entry conditions for your nationality with the competent authorities and your carrier. This guide does not determine eligibility to enter. Save your accommodation address, contact and useful confirmations offline. Do not keep the only copy on a phone with no battery.

Ask the property for a vehicle-accessible arrival point and the final walking route. A medina address does not promise door-to-door vehicle access.

Choose your base

The ONMT distinguishes the medina and its riads from the modern districts of Guéliz and Hivernage [S1]. Choose according to access, pace and activities rather than a pool photograph.

Compare three properties for the same dates and occupants. Verify the exact room, stairs, advertised cooling or heating, desired quiet, breakfast and cancellation terms. A beautiful courtyard tells you little about your actual room.

For late arrival, confirm reception and transfer cost. If access matters, request specific measurements: steps, lift, door width and distance from the vehicle.

Base	Deciding question
Medina	What is the final walking route?
Guéliz	How will I reach my chosen visits?
Hivernage	What is the total with meals and transport?
