THE GUIDE

One city, your own perspective

A colour catches your attention, a line leads towards a door, light falls across a wall: a picture often starts with something small. This notebook helps you notice it and give it room in the frame. A phone is enough for the exercises.

Eight settings provide starting points. Each comes with a visual intention and something to try, followed by three-picture sequences, an editing method and printable worksheets. This is not another ranking of riads or restaurants.

Place information was checked on 1 November 2026. Illustrations are AI interpretations, not scouting photographs. They suggest compositions; check access and photography rules with each venue.

THE GUIDE

El Fenn: a city beyond the parasols

El Fenn's rooftop combines red seating, parasols, planting and rooftops with the Koutoubia skyline. Its official page welcomes non-residents while noting limited capacity. Rooftop access does not grant entry to bedrooms or other hotel areas. [S2]

Frame one nearby element, then let the roofline breathe. Avoid a parasol appearing to touch the top of the minaret: a small sideways shift from your permitted position can separate the shapes.

THE GUIDE

Riad Jardin Secret: a frame of leaves

Riad Jardin Secret, at Arset Aouzal in the Dar El Bacha area, is accommodation distinct from the public garden in Mouassine. Its planted courtyard, zellige, stucco and wood create an intimate setting. [S3]

From a position welcomed by the house, leave a soft foreground leaf on one edge and a sharp opening beyond. Do not move a plant or enter a private room. Depth comes from looking, not taking over the space.
